Drink up new offerings in beer, spirits

Melody Baetens / The Detroit News

To keep you fresh on what's up in the beer and spirits industry, here are a few newsy tidbits.

Guinness locator

Guinness is making it easier for you to find its beer with the new Guinness Pub Finder iPhone app, which uses GPS to help fans know the name, address and phone numbers of the closest bars that serve the brew. It also provides extras such as a tutorial on how to create the perfect pint, animated screen savers and information on responsible drinking.

Organic tequila?

Did you know there was a line of organic tequila? Casa Noble is a triple-distilled, 100-percent organic tequila. Over the summer, the brand announced the release of a limited-edition single-barrel collection, along with a set of mini bottles. The mini set includes one 50 ml bottle of the unaged Casa Nobel Crystal, the Resposado and the Anejo.

Taste of Absinthe

Recently, Royal Oak's Commune Lounge rolled out a new line of absinthe-inspired cocktails. The 1920s-style bar, located in the basement of Belgian restaurant Bastone, has designed Absinthe Suisse, made with Absinthe Ordinaire, amaretto, cream and orange juice -- yum! You can also try the Moulin Rouge, a seductive mix of Versinthe Absinthe Superior, peach schnapps, grenadine and soda water. The new menu of cocktails range from $6.25-$10.

Spooky brews

Just in time for Halloween, Vermont's Magic Hat brewery is offering a Night of the Living Dead variety 12-pack of its fall beers. The pack includes the return of Roxy Rolles, a toasty, almost spicy beer. You also
