Fashion in Detroit, the new high-fashion event created by former Project Runway contestant Joe Faris, starts today at the Detroit Zoo.

The Birmingham native says he started planning the event in April in hopes of drawing more designers and fashion interest to Detroit.

Faris' event joins Detroit Fashion Week, an event that has been gathering Detroit's fashion community since 2005 and just wrapped up this year's show at the beginning of September.

The first show starts today at 2 p.m.. Check out the list of designers here.

Tickets to the afterglow party tomorrow night are still available and cost $50. The party starts at 8 p.m. and will take place at Stage 3 Productions in Warren.

Faris was on Fox 2 News this morning to promote his event and show some clothes from his line.
